Wigan♡ Council

Edward Hall Diary Collection

This artificial collection of diaries, journals, letter-books and miscellaneous papers was donated in stages from 1947 by Edward Hall (b.1898), a dealer and collector of MSS and books. Hall married Emily Littler of Wigan, and discovered the surviving MSS of Ellen Weeton (see below) in a bookshop on Wallgate in 1925. The collection comprises mainly original MSS (some items are in modern transcript form), and most of the documents have not been published. Only a few of the items relate to the Wigan area or even the North West, the authors originating from all parts of the country and oversees, as well as from all social backgrounds.

EHC1/M769	The Walker Diaries Vols. 182	July 1789-October 1796	Travel/ Military/Domestic.		Diary with reference to Mrs. Anna Walker (1763-1816) - Wife of Major General George Townshend Walker, (1764-1814) - Peninsula Hero. Mother of Anna Louisa (1796-18-) and Harriet Eliza. The diary begins on her wedding day, mostly a record of travel to the Isle Of Wight and the south coast, 1790 spert mostly in Hamburg and Berlin - they mix with the royal family. In 1791 they visit St. Omer in France, via Dover. In 1793, there is a reference to Marie-Anchiotes brought to the scaffold. In 1764-75 there is no diary - Walker is on active service. In 1796, they visit Venice, Padua, Verona, Florence, Rome, Naples and Berlin again. The diary is mostly concerned with the social life of the Walkers, but is an important picture of court and society in the Napleonic period. Continues from EHC1, with Mrs. Walker takes up the post of Inspecting Officer of Recruiting in Manchester - many descriptions. Some important theater references, including a performance by Kemble. Includes a description of Budon, a canal trip and a coal works visit. Occasional reference to external events, e.g Nesions victory at the Batle of the Nile, Lord and Lady Paimerston, and the launch of the Dreadnought. No diary for 1799 & 18.00. A positing to Prelend takes place towards the end of the	No

EHC3/M771 EHC4/M722	The Walker Diaries Vol. 5: The Walker Diary footnotes	March 1802-November 1805.			Continues from EHC2, and narrates the Walker's stay in Ireland in the various garrisons of Cork, Belfast, Ballyshannon, Omagh, Eniskillen, Longford, Fernory and Clonnell. There are also descriptions of Dublin, Kilkenny and Mount Stewart. There is not much mention of the real Ireland everything is a continuous round of balls etc. There is a description of the abortive Robert Emmer tebellion of July 1803. Mts. Walker also speaks of the fapting in India which continued throughout 18034. Edited by Edward Hall. Expansive notes and explanations to aid the references made by Mrs. Walker to many people, places and events. Very useful especially in the potted biographies of people of the day.	No
EHC5/M773	The Walker Diary Vol. 6				Continuing from EHC 3 with the domestic side of military life in various garrisons in Ireland, mainly at Clommell, Middleton, Fermoy, Mallow and Cork. Several imisinformed references to events show the extent of confusion as to what was actually happening abroad with Napoleon. There is a long entry about P#t's death in January 1806, and several interesting medical remedies. February - May 1807 is spent on leave in England; they visit Bristol, Bath, London and Hampton Court. They return to Dublin via Snowdon, Anglesey and Holyhaed. In July 1807, Walker sailed to Copenhagen, whilst Mrs. Walker moved to England. Continuing from EHCS, the daily life of Anna Walker whilst her husband is on active senvice abroad. No diary available between August 1807 and December 1807. In 1808 George is in Gibralar, Mala, Sicily and Cadiz. In May he goes to Portugal where he leads the victory at Vimeiro. Anna is resident at Portsmouth, Shriden, Windsor and London, where see sees a tor the royal family. In 1809, George joins the il-fated Walcheren Expedition. Interesting reference to Hurt, agoled after Peterolo. In 1810	No
EHC6/M774	The Walker Diary Vols. 7&8	January 1808-December 1810	r		there is an account of Sir Francis Burdett's arrest. Many prints and drawings have been inserted by Mr. Hall into the typescript.	No

EHC6a/M774a			Continuing from EHC6, the daly life of the last three years of Anna Walker. It includes extensive footnotes by Mr. Hall. The diary begins with Mrs. Walker's husband in Coruna. There is a mention of Eigin) and the Parthenon Marbles. In Carton, Mrs. Walker makes a reference to the POW camp and the handicraft of the French pisoners. In 1812, George Walker is in Medoors, Olivienha, Mengualdi, Luidad, Rodrigo, Badajoy and Lisbon. He returns to England but in 1813, he england but in 1813, he england but in 1813, he schwary 23rd she was burual y 23rd she was burual y 23rd she was burual y 23rd she was burual y 23rd she was		Major-General George Townshend Walker, (1764-1842), Peninsula hero. The diary is not a diary as such, but an autobiography covering Edward Hall's life from his birth until 1940. Covers his early life in Barnsley, his marriage and financial troubles through to his move down to Surbiton. He takes us through the Depression era and his temporary embrace of communism. Contains some family letters. In December 1934 he begins his hief diary, which ends on April 24th 1935. Roun-of-the-mill entries on most days mostly concerning books he has bought and wireless programmes the family has heard. There is a break in his diary which is filled by an excerpt from his daughter's school diary. On 30th September 1939 he leaves for France with the ex-officers' Volumer Reserves. This diary was written whils Edward Hall was a F/L and Adjutart of no.96t (Balloon) Squadron, Barry, South Wales, with HQ situated in a requisitioned hal called "Brymethen', on Dnas Powis Common. Edward Hall describes the diary as being "mainly devoted to the re-orientation of self with new surroundings, and spiritual development against war background.' The diary also describes what the biltz was like in that area or Wales. Towards the end of the diary he volunteers for service in the Middle East. (see later diary)	f

EHC18/M786	Henry and Marianne Thornton	1760-1815	Politics/Religion.	Excellent	The letters of Henry and Marianne Thornton, and the diary of Henry are important in a number of respects, and they should really be considered separately. A) Letters : All of the letters are of a personal, close nature: the are from the family and very close friends. They are warm, open, expansiv and free from restraint. The letters, when taken together, almost constitute a history of Marianne Thornton. They describe her courtship and marriage to Henry Thornton; they also fill in the gaps when either of them were away from the family home, up to their deaths in 1815. There are also letters from them both to mutual firends, especially Hannah More and these too illustrate their honesty and openness which is evident in their letters. B) Diary: The dany was begun because 'my religion consists too much in active duties and in efforts to edify and correct others, and too little in sercius self-examination, attentive reading of the scriptures, prayer and secret self denial. The diary is incredibly honest and, linked with the letters makes fascinating and moving reading.	e r

			Minineary (7 years wai)		This is an old exercise book which is written from both ends. It was written principally for her daughter, Mary, who she believed would be curious in later years about her mother's history. She outlines the history of her life from her birth through to the period when she ran the house school after her mother's death, her brother's marriage and her exclusion from his home. She began writing this history on February 4th 1824, however after writing 37 pages she ends aburptly whild discussing the joys of reading.

This volume is taken over almost entirely by journal entries. She visits London (May 13th- July 30th 1824), and describes the trp in great detail. On her return home she moves from Upholland to Prescol (August 1824-May 1825) in order to be as close as possible to her daughter Mary who was living at Parr Hall in St. Helens. Her descriptions of her attempts to see her daughter are incrediby sad and desperate. In May 1825 Miss Weeton sets off on a trip to Wales, and there is a description of her ascent of Snowdon.
